

- Belugas mostly live in Arctic waters, however they can live as far South as the St. Lawrence estuary.
- In order to stay warm in the cold Arctic waters they have a layer of blubber under their skin that can be 15 cm thick!
- Belugas are known as “sea canaries” because of the array of sounds that they can make.